

My Dirty Sink

Hsiao Ching

I have two sinks in my kitchen that are side to side. Both white and new

One has a food disposal while the other is just a regular sink.

We always use the food disposal one, and cover the second one with a rubber mat.

As I was cleaning the main sink we use, I was thinking how nice it was I did not have to bother with the other one since we never use it.

However, one day, I noticed the edge of the white mat was dirty. I lifted up the rubber and was shocked to see filthy sink. When I picked up the drain covering that sits in the opening, I noticed that also was full of black scum. It was thick, smelly, and disgusting.

To my horror, I realized that the sink needed to be used to be kept clean.

It was dirtier than the other one that I threw rotten food down. This one was rusting away even though we never used it.

What a great analogy of life.

Although Christians are sinful and dirty, when we let God use us, he cleans us and we are well and doing what we were created for.

When you are not allowing God to work in your life, you will not only be dirty, but end up useless and destroyed.

We live in a Florida city which many wealthy go to their houses and run the water, flush their toilets, even drive their cars around the block.

Why? Because without use, even the best will die.
